

w banks very commendably have al-in the successful discharge of their s, though on a reduced scale in busithat others are efficiently attempting in a similar position. But from the ries, the inclination seems to be to ks in one city, equity, state, or large person the measure fit all others in and willing to unite. Their posi-jects, are essentially unlike, though in The condition of the former depenis believed to be stronger now as to circulation, or immediate means to lities, so as readily to sustain specary circumstances, than has been the banks of the United States at any for-

